DEPUTY CLERK: Counsel, please state your appearances

for the government.

MR. THOMAS: Good afternoon, your Honor.

Andrew Thomas and Matthew Podolsky for the United States.

DEPUTY CLERK: And for the defendants?

MR. LUSTBERG: Good afternoon, your Honor.

Lawrence Lustberg on behalf of defendant Bill Hwang.

With me are my partners, Thomas R. Valen and Jeffrey Nagel, who are sitting in the front row for the Court's convenience.

Mr. Hwang is here.

MS. MULLIGAN: Good afternoon, your Honor.

Mary Mulligan from Friedman Kaplan. With me is Tim Haggerty. And our client, Pat Halligan, is in the front row.

THE COURT: Good afternoon.

All right. This is the initial conference. In front of me, I understand that both defendants have been arraigned on the indictment. Let me get a sense of how the parties would like to proceed, starting with counsel for the government.

MR. THOMAS: Yes, your Honor.

In advance of today's conference, we conferred with counsel for both defendants. It's our collective sense that the trial here will ultimately take probably somewhere between one and two months. The reason for that length is the complexity of the case, the number of witnesses, including the likelihood of the number of expert witnesses on both sides who testify.

So our proposal to the Court would be to set a trial date now to reserve two months significantly down the line and to set a status conference for later this summer, perhaps in August, to set an interim briefing schedule. What the government would propose is block off two months perhaps in May or early fall of 2023.

THE COURT: And tell me a little bit more as to why you think this would take a month or two months to try?

MR. THOMAS: Your Honor, the government has charged Mr. Hwang and Mr. Halligan with participating in extraordinary and unusual market manipulation and fraud scheme.

The essence of the allegation is that Mr. Hwang manipulated in an almost unheard of degree, a number of publicly traded securities for his benefit, driving up the value of the portfolio he managed by almost $30 billion in the space of a year. And in order to do that, he and Mr. Halligan and the people that worked with them lied to a number of banks on Wall Street.

And as a result, there are on, top of the manipulation conduct, multiple iterations of fraud occurring at most major banks that operate in New York, and a trial of this matter would involve proof of the securities transaction, proof of the lies that were conveyed to each of those categories.

THE COURT: So to be clear, is it your position that some of these banks would be victims of this fraud?

MR. THOMAS: That is correct, your Honor.

THE COURT: I may have a conflict if JP Morgan Chase Bank is involved in this as a potential victim, or Bank of New York Mellon is involved, then I have a conflict, and this will have to go back into the wheel, be assigned to someone else.

So my guess is that this is involving major banks; that one of those two very well may be a victim in this crime.

Does the government have any position on that right now?

MR. THOMAS: Your Honor, we'll certainly go back and make sure that we can speak with authority on both banks.

Speaking right now, I do not believe that Bank of New York

Mellon figures in any significant way to the story, and I don't believe that Bank of New York Mellon is a loss holder.

JP Morgan Chase does figure into the story toward the end in that it's the recipient of part of the conduct towards the end of the charged period that would have enabled Mr. Hwang to enlarge his number of accounts.

THE COURT: Is if JP Morgan Bank is involved, then I need to recuse myself, and I'll put this in the wheel and have this assigned to another judge that doesn't have that conflict.

I'll hear from the defense if you have any thoughts on that, but it seems to me that I need to recuse.

Defense counsel, any thoughts on this?

MR. LUSTBERG: Well, your Honor, we'd hate to see you go. But if the Court feels that whatever its interest is —

I'm not interested in inquiring — with regard to JP Morgan requires them to recuse them, JP Morgan Chase does figure into the story. It's not a major player in this story. If you wanted to hear things out a little bit more or go through motion practice and the like and get a little bit more of it, I think that's something that we could do. As Mr. Thomas said, it's only at the very end that JP Morgan Chase comes into it.

But nonetheless, this is largely about whether banks — well, part of the case is about whether banks were defrauded. Bigger part of the case has to do — has nothing to do with the banks in many ways. It has to do with whether open market manipulation constituted a crime. And I suspect there would be a lot of motion practice on that that would absolutely have nothing to do with the banks.

THE COURT: Just to be clear as to why I think I need to recuse: I own stock in JP Morgan Chase as well as Bank of New York Mellon. But in addition to that, I have a family member -- my wife is an attorney who worked for JP Morgan Chase and currently works for Bank of New York Mellon. So I think that it certainly makes sense for me to recuse from this case.

Anything else from the other defense attorney?

MS. MULLIGAN: Good afternoon, your Honor. Thank you for your remarks.

Obviously, the majority of this indictment doesn't focus on Patrick Halligan or his conduct. It presents unprecedented issues with respect to RICO conspiracy. It also presents unprecedented issues with respect to the regulations of security-based swaps. So we look forward to proceeding and representing our client, and we understand the Court's position. And thank you very much for your time.

THE COURT: Anything else from the government on this?

MR. THOMAS: No, your Honor. We certainly agree with

Mr. Lustberg's characterization that JP Morgan figures in at the end, and differ to the Court's good judgment where that leads us.

THE COURT: All right. Here's what I'll do. I will recuse myself. I will reach out to case assignment and get another judge assigned to this case.

Is there any sort of ministerial thing that the parties would like me to do in the meantime, counsel for the government or the defense? Is there any sort of ministerial thing?

I think what makes sense is to perhaps have a date for a status report for, say, Tuesday of next week just to make sure that this case has been reassigned and make sure this case doesn't get lost somewhere. But is there anything else ministerial the parties would like me to do, counsel for the government?

MR. THOMAS: Your Honor, the government would endorse that approach and would move to exclude time from the computation under the Speedy Trial Act between today and Tuesday to facilitate the reassignment of the case and to continue to allow the government to produce discovery.

MS. MULLIGAN: Your Honor, I have a request.

Obviously, we have not yet received full discovery. I think, like many situations in this case, there's been a great rush, which is very unfortunate. And I would ask that the government put forth the victims to avoid this type of situation. I'm not sure how the situation could have been avoided, but we're obviously a very big case, and I'm not sure if the indictment has full notice as to who the alleged victims may or may not be, the alleged witnesses. But we're in a difficult situation with the recusal that's coming up. Perhaps the government should have attended to this.

In any event, I'm not sure. I don't want to be in the situation yet again. So I've given the scope of this case, the information that's in the government's possession, understanding who the victims are, who the witnesses are, so our clients can have the justice they deserve.

THE COURT: So are you asking me to do anything today?

MS. MULLIGAN: Well, I think the burden is on the government. Perhaps the government -- however the government advises the Court with respect to the victims, the parties, the witnesses, and I think we would like that information on our end. But I think that's important here.

THE COURT: All right. I'll leave that up to the new judge who gets this case. You can raise that issue with the new judge, whoever he, she, or they might be.

Yes, counsel.

MR. LUSTBERG: Thank you, Judge.

One ministerial aspect that I'd like to take care of.

Under Federal Rule of Criminal Procedure 7, technically, bills of particulars are due within 14 days of arraignment. We're actually a little past that now, you know, presumably there was going to be a motion schedule set, and we've discussed this with the government, and as part of that motion practice, we might or might not seek those particulars. But I just wanted to make sure that, for the record, that we preserve the ability to do so today. And so I just want to put that on the record and make sure that nobody is going to be precluded as a result of today's — that was certainly something I was going to raise with the Court today at this status conference if your Honor had not recused.

THE COURT: Again, this seemed like you're not asking me to do anything about today; is that correct?

MR. LUSTBERG: Well, I want the application -- what I would ask for the Court to do is to -- as your Honor is permitted to do under Rule 7, to just extend the time for us to file for bills of particulars, pending whatever motion schedule is set by whoever your successor is. So, yes, I would ask the Court to do that.

THE COURT: Well, I'm not going to do that. That very may well be something that's contested by the government, and since I'm going to recuse myself, I want to try to avoid getting into any sort of contested issues, whatever that may be.

MR. LUSTBERG: I understand.

THE COURT: What's the defense's position between excluding time between now and Tuesday? It appears to me this is a complex case, and, certainly, it doesn't seem as if the defense is in a hurry to try this case by Tuesday. So it seems to me that it may be wise to exclude time under the Speedy Trial Act between now and Tuesday.

Does defense have any position on that?

MR. LUSTBERG: No problem with excluding time between now and Tuesday.

Your Honor, I want to make sure I understand because

I'm supposed to be out of town -- do you anticipate we're going to have an in-person status conference on Tuesday?

THE COURT: No. This will be a joint status report.

I'm not ordering a conference in front of me. I want to make sure I get a joint status report if the case has not been transferred. If the case has been transferred to someone else, you don't need to file anything. No one needs to file anything.

MR. LUSTBERG: Okay.

THE COURT: I want to make sure the case doesn't get lost.

MR. LUSTBERG: Okay.

THE COURT: Okay?

MR. LUSTBERG: And --

THE COURT: Go ahead.

MR. LUSTBERG: And just -- I apologize. And just so it's clear. I thought I understood from the conversation I had with the government that they did not contest our ability to file a bill of -- you said you were afraid that it would be disputed. You didn't want to rule on it. But my understanding was they did not oppose that request.

THE COURT: I'd say just deal with that with the new judge who's going to have the case. I don't want to rule on that. That's something the new judge may have a different view than I might have about that.

MR. LUSTBERG: I understand.

THE COURT: So let's have a joint status report filed by May 24 in the event that this case has not been reassigned to another judge.

I will exclude time under the Speedy Trial Act between today's date and May 24. I find it's in the interest of justice and the interest of the defendants to exclude time, so the defense may be better prepared for trial. And I will exclude time for that reason. I'll enter an order to that effect.

Anything else from the government today

MR. THOMAS: No, your Honor. Thank you.

THE COURT: Anything else from the defense?

MR. LUSTBERG: No, Judge.

MS. MULLIGAN: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: We're adjourned.
